Coeur continues to closely monitor the rapidly-evolving situation regarding the 2019 novel coronavirus (COVID-19). We are fully committed to protecting our employees and the communities in which we operate and are taking steps to limit any possible disruptions to our business.

What is the current status of Coeur’s operations?

All of our active mines continue to operate. Each site has developed rigorous screening, education and modifications to work procedures to limit COVID-19 exposure and transmission.

What steps is Coeur taking to address COVID-19?

We continue to proactively assess the situation regarding COVID-19 across our operations and at our corporate headquarters. We are following guidance from the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, World Health Organization as well as state and local authorities to safeguard the health, safety and well-being of our employees, contractors and communities and minimize business interruption.

Key initiatives we have undertaken include:
- Travel and site access restricted to business-critical needs
- Health and travel questionnaires as well as temperature checks required prior to entering sites
- Increased cleaning and disinfecting of common areas
- Social distancing requirements
- Extended rotational schedules at certain operations to reduce travel to and from site
- Employee testing, contact tracing technology and appropriate quarantine protocols in response to any COVID-19 exposures
- Partnering with our communities in communication and local responses

Have any Coeur employees contracted the virus?

Yes. We have implemented contact tracing and isolation/quarantine protocols in those instances which have been effective in reducing the threat of further transmission at our sites and in our communities. In response to several reported positive COVID-19 cases at our Kensington mine outside of Juneau, Alaska, we have commenced comprehensive testing, contact tracing and sanitation efforts at the site. At this time, we anticipate a minor short-term production impact associated with this situation, but expect to achieve our 2020 production guidance at Kensington.

Have there been any supply interruptions or disruptions to shipping schedules or metal sales?

We have not encountered any significant delays in the shipment and sales of our doré or concentrates. Critical supply chain elements have also been evaluated with no material disruptions experienced to date. We remain in close contact with our critical vendors, customers and transportation providers and establishing alternative back-up arrangements to mitigate the impact of any disruptions related to COVID-19.
